

I am 66 and I recommend the EarZin for age-related hearing loss. I have had the EarZin for a couple of weeks. I don't use it all of the time, but here are some times when I did:

I was watching TV and I couldn't hear it because a couple of young guys were talking. I wanted to say, "Quiet down!", but I got out the EarZin instead. I was then able to hear the TV.

I was teaching a language class and I asked everyone to practice a dialog. Previously I would have to get my head right next to people to hear what they were saying, and it would still be difficult. With the EarZin I was able to stand at a regular distance and hear better than before.

I was at a dinner of about 200. The EarZin helped me hear the people near me at the table. However, with glasses clinking, etc., I had trouble hearing the woman sitting across the circular table that sits about 8 people. I asked the woman next to me, and she said she had to strain to hear the same woman. She also said that her husband (who was not present) had just bought an expensive hearing aid and was having trouble with it.
